NUMBER 28

REVENUE MEN MAKE THEIR REPORT

Inspector Hines Filed a Report to Gov. Beckham--Present Methods Criticized.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 15.—State Inspector Henry B. Hines filed his report to Gov. Beckham, covering the information made by him of all the suits by State revenue agents from July 1902, August 1905. It shows the total number of suits was 5,024, but this does not include the number of cases settled out of court without suit. Of these 5,024 suits there was a recovery on 1,864. The total amount due the State and due in the 1,864 suits was $84,985.

Of this accounted for, or paid in the Treasury except $6,365.79, and the amount failed to be reported to the State office by the county clerks or sheriffs.

The matter of A. M. Harrison, Revenue Agent, removed, the Inspector states the facts in the Swann-day case, over which the company now stands indicted in the State and Powell Circuit courts. In this case, he recites that Harrison collected $373.95 from E. H. Taylor, Jr., of Frankfort, and never repaid it, or accounted for it. He also states that Harrison made a large number of land sales for taxes in the counties which have never been reported. Several other small collections were made by Harrison, of which he makes no report.

In speaking of Frank A. Lucas, Revenue Agent State-at-large, the Inspector states:

"It has been and is impossible to check up his transactions, as there is no record or basis upon which an investigation can be made as to whether or not he has assessed properly and collected taxes from numerous people, whom by mail notices of liability for taxes were sent, with threat of immediate proceedings for the assessment of the property unless the taxes were paid with him. There is no record of the parties to whom he mails these notices, and if he fails or omits to file with the Clerk a full list of the settlements made by him the matter is closed, and there is no record by which to ascertain the amount due the State and county."

Going into fees or penalties which revenue agents have collected from July, 1902 to August, 1905, the Inspector totals them as follows: To T. C. Albritton, $28,624.17; to George H. Alexander, $15,087.08; to Frank A. Lucas, $6,617.95; to A. M. Harrison, $2,387.49; to A. J. Bizot, who was appointed in January, 1904, last, $12,359.36.

In closing his report the Inspector makes six recommendations to the Governor, and through him to the assembly, of changes needed in the present law governing these agents. The first is that no agreed judgment or consent for assessment of omitted property shall be entered without the written consent of the County Attorney where the property ought to be assessed is located. Second, compensation in any way of commission on the amount collected should be provided for County Attorneys for their services. Third, County Clerks should be required at the end of each month to report to the Auditor the names of all persons against whom assessment of omitted property have been made, and to forward copies of all judgments secured by revenue. Fourth, to require Sheriffs in remitting taxes to include all penalties due the officers for causing the assessment. Fifth, a severe penalty and removal from office should be the judgment for the collection of money by revenue agents without special written authority from the Auditor. Sixth, that the term of the revenue agent expire with the term of the Auditor appointing him.

Mrs. Lena B. Powell Dead.

Mrs. Lena B. Powell died Tuesday morning at the home of her parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. J. Franks, of Pinkneyville, of tuberculosis, aged 29 years.

When her health began to give way recently she came from her home in Halls Tenn. to her childhood's home where she died.

Mrs. Powell was formerly Miss Lena B. Franks. She was married twice; the first time to G. W. Eldier, of this city. The union was blessed with one son, Rudell, who survives his mother. Several years ago the father died with this same dreaded disease, tuberculosis. Later, she married Mr. Powell and removed to Halls Tenn. Besides being survived by husband and son, she leaves a father and mother, several younger brothers and a sister, Mrs. N. R. Farris, of Salem.

Mrs. Powell was a well known, loved and honored by all for her many, many womanly traits of character. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at the Baptist church conducted by Rev. Henry and the remains were laid to rest in the New cemetery at this place.

Elect Paynter "Some More."

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 16.—Both houses formally elected Judge Thomas H. Paynter to the United States Senate again. They will meet in joint session tomorrow, and upon the reading of today's Journals and comparison of votes, Paynter will finally be declared elected "some more." A bill is now pending in the Senate to remove the necessity of electing a United States Senator more than one time.

Little Child Dies at Repton.

Gladys, the little eight year old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. Newcom, of the Repton neighborhood, died Wednesday at DeKoven, where she had been attending school.

Congestion of the brain was the cause of the little girl's death. She had only been sick about a week and her sudden death was not only a shock to her parents but the entire community. She was a bright, lovable child and during her short stay here had won the love of all who knew her.

The father is a brother of T. F. Newcom, of this city. The mother, who was a daughter of Alex Woody and wife, died several years ago.

The funeral services were conducted Thursday morning by Rev. W. T. Oakley at Mt. Zion. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved parents and relatives.

Guests Appalled Him.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Representative Philip Campbell, of Kansas, introduced a railroad rate bill that so pleased a Baltimore manufacturer named Patterson that he gave a dinner to Mr. Campbell, his wife and some other Kansas people, at the new Willard Hotel.

The Kansas men were there in full evening dress and the Kansas women in fine evening gowns. Mr. Patterson appeared in a rusty black frock coat, a turn down collar and a made up tie. He carried a slouch hat. When he met his guests he was appalled.

"Why," he said, "I am astonished. I have been reading what William Allen White has written about Kansas and the people out there dress, and I gave considerable thought to costume. I thought these were the kind of clothes Kansans always wear."

Entertained.

Mesdames Tonkins and Gugenheim delightfully entertained at euchre last Thursday evening at the New Marion Hotel.

The spacious dining hall was used for the players and was beautifully decorated with holly and evergreens. Mrs. Ada Cavender won the lady's prize which was a lovely automobile scarf.

Mr. Barnett won the gentleman's prize—a half dozen pairs of silk hose. An elegant lunch was served.

A miserable invalid suffering from disordered female functions, monthly pains, nervousness, falling feeling, dizziness, indigestion, biliousness, constipation, etc., will find relief in Wine of Cardui and Theford's Black-Draught, two of the most valuable, reliable, scientific, curative medicines known for the treatment of sick women. They are sold by all drug stores, and should be in every home. Try them.

NEW COMPANIES ARE ORGANIZED.

Twelve Hundred Acres of Mineral Land Bought in the County of Livingston--Mr. Miller of Louisville Displays the Sort of Nerve that Never Fails.

We understand the Hamp Mining Co. has been incorporated and will put in good machinery to work out the spar and lead at the Hamp mines. This will be of great advantage to that community as it will give work to several people. —Elizabethtown Independent.

Joplin, Mo., January 14.—The largest week's value in the history of the mining camp was recorded the past week. The shipment was $6790 greater in value than for any week last year, and brings the total sales of the first half of January up to $505,000.

The highest price paid for ore was $54 per ton for zinc and $81 per ton for lead. The price of lead continues to go up, and some of the operators are looking forward to $100 lead.

Articles have been filed in County Clerk C. E. Weldon's office to incorporate the Red Hill Mining Company, the capital, $20,000. The company is composed of capitalists residing at La Grange and Skylight in this state. The property to be operated is the Dave Vaughn tract of land adjoining the well known Mann carbonate of zinc mines. Considerable prospecting has already been done on the Vaughn tract which reveals a very flattering showing. This property is evidently equally as good as the Mann and there is already something like twenty tons of the carbonate on the dump ready for shipment.

Parties at Lola have uncovered and considerably developed one of two veins of ore that traverse a tract of land lying on Deer Creek—the boundary line between this county and Livingston. These parties have sunk a shaft to the depth of thirty-three feet and found both wall rocks at a depth of twenty-three feet. The sinking revealed bayrites, spar and zinc. In the bottom of the shaft at the present depth the predominating ore is zinc in the sulphide form. The tract is also said to contain the well known Mann vein of carbonate. The prospecting done on the property was under the direction of the land owners who are not practicable miners, but their efforts have met with remarkable success in every detail. The present shaft on the fissure vein uncovered, being well constructed for a working shaft, all showing that good judgment has been exercised. Samples of the ore found on this place have been presented at THE RECORD office for exhibition.

Another new company has just assumed form and will be ready for extensive operations in the district before the opening of early spring. This company which is using remarkable foresight, has secured the mining rights on 1200 acres of land in Livingston county, which will develop some of the richest properties in the field. All property secured is on the well known veins as laid out in the reports of both, the federal government and the state geological surveys. The name of the new company is the Colconda Fluor Spar Mining Company, whose capital stock is $75,000 and all sold, authoritative report. Prospect work on the land acquired, has shown up what is said to be two immense veins, one of layrites and one of fluor spar. These proven veins are shown by the scientific reports to be the continuation of the well-known Rosiclaire and Fairview veins. Both veins are said to show by surface indications to cross the entire length of the 1200 acre purchase. Development work will continue and be pushed as fast as men and money can do it, and every indication is that this mining company is extremely fortunate in securing control of what experts have said will prove to be one, perhaps, the best mineral land in the district. An expert report states that the outcropping at points indicates that the width between the vein walls is almost seventy feet. The bayrites found is as white as snow and the quality of the fluor spar is first-class. Besides the two ores mentioned, the indications are that lead may also be found, which is the case in both the Fairview and Rosiclaire properties. This land being located near the Ohio river at a point almost opposite a railroad incline brings about a state of affairs that will result in ideal transportation facilities. Wm. Miller, the president of the company, has been mainly instrumental in effecting the organization and securing the property.

AGAIN ELECTED GENERAL MANAGER

Of the Dark Tobacco Growers Protective Association Is Felix
G. Ewing.

Clarksville, Ky., Jan. 12.—Everything is going along smoothly at the Dark Tobacco Growers' association headquarters. The big Regle deal has been closed, and nearly all the warehousemen have received money for the farmers' tobacco, and thousands of dollars have already been paid to the farmers for settling it. There remain on hand between 1,000 and 1,500 hogheads of 25,000 hogheads which are controlled by the association at the beginning of the fight. The success of the association viewed at this point, has been marvelous, and is regarded as one of the grandest commercial victories ever won. The price realized in the sale has been from 30 to 60 per cent and even more over that received for the weed last year, and the price for the present crop will be higher. There has been some complaint by the people over the sale of tobacco, but it should be remembered that the association encountered many obstacles during its first year's existence which have all been overcome.

The executive committee of the Dark Tobacco Protective association met at Guthrie. F. G. Ewing was elected general manager of the association.

NEW UNION CHURCH STANDS ON OLD SITE

The Dilney Burned Down Some Time Ago and New Building Springs up—Letter of Thanks.

What was known as Dilney Baptist church, burned to the ground a few months ago without any insurance. The community was soon canvassed by the officers and members of the congregation and plans were soon on foot for the building of a new church. The work has been pushed and now a new house of worship stands on the old site. For the success of the enterprise, perhaps no other is more deserving of honor than W. R. Vaughn, who has been most persistent. The committee has seen fit to christen the edifice, "New Union."

A friend of the church addresses the following letter to THE RECORD:

Dear Sir:—The committee of New Union church want to thank the good people of Marion, Ky., and the good people all over the country for their liberal donation in assisting to rebuild New Union church, and while the members and the people all over this country are well pleased in the way Committee William Sutes is having our new church built. Finance Committee David Vaughn is keeping a close account of the amount paid out for said church.

Committeeman W. R. Vaughn is doing some excellent work on the building.

Let us join in and help the committee to build this house of worship and have a big meeting and the good Lord will be with you. A FRIEND.

Tom Watson's for January.

In the editorial "The Window and the Trust," Tom Watson's salutes the new year with the story of an actual case as an argument against the tyranny of corporate wealth. He presents, farther, an analysis of political conditions in his home state, Georgia. Under his other titles he ranges, with equal fluency and force, from "No Law for the Gold Reserve" to "Orators and Oratory." As usual, his editorials are followed by an assortment of short stories, articles and sketches. John G. Neihardt's "A Political Coup at Little Omaha" is deservedly first in the list. W. G. Joerns appears at the timely moment with a thorough and thoughtful article on "Government Aid to Railroads." "The Dark Days," by Owen Oliver, is a curious story in which the fascination of novelty has a suggested background of moral import. "The Man in the Valley," by Sara Lindsay Coleman, is a pretty love story; and there are other contributions by Theodore Draseier, Charles Fort, Tom P. Morgan, M. E. Buhler, R. W. Kauffman and Eugene C. Dolson. "Suppressed Cartoons," by Thomas H. Tibbles, and Tilden Semper's expose of traffic in conditional foods, entitled, "Robbing the Farmer," are also of ready quality. Besides the regular educational and other departments, Mr. Watson begins in this number a department of book reviews under his own signature.—Tom Watson's Magazine, New York, 10 cents.

"No Shylock."

A few days ago a man who was at the depot to take a train suddenly cried out that some one had stolen his valise, and he began such a hullabaloo that everybody had to be interested.

"I got that 'ere satchel right down thar" and stepped to the door, he explained to the officer, "and when I got back it was gone."

"Well, you should have been careful. We are not responsible for such losses." "You ain't eh? What's the president of the city?"

"Out of the city, sir." "What's the general manager?" "He's sick abed."

"What's the superintendent?" "Won't be here 'till four o'clock."

"Wal now, somebody's got to make good that loss."

"What was the value?" "Fifty dollars, and not a cent less."

"What were the contents?" "I had twelve shirts, a new suit of clothes, an over coat and lots of other things."

"Was it a carpet sack?" "It was."

"One handle gone and the lock broken."

"Yes, it had one handle off and I had it tied with a string."

"Is this it?" asked the officer as he took the baggage off a bench not six feet away.

"Great snakes that's hit!" chuckled the owner.

In handing it to him the string broke and the bag flew open and out rolled two old shirts, a pair of socks and five or six dirty collars—all there was in it.

"Them are the duds you wanted fifty dollars for, are they?" questioned the officer.

"No sir, was the indignant reply, "I would have taken the money for loss of time and damage done my feelings—I'm no Shylock, sir."

FRANKFORT LETTER

FROM MAN ON GROUND

Daughters of Confederacy Seek Passage of Law to Prohibit the Play
"Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Editor THE CRITTENDEN RECORD:

A few words to you.

Most of the members of the legislature spent last Sunday at home and there is little talk of any work of importance being taken up within the next few days.

A great many bills have already been introduced, referred to the various standing committees and ordered to be printed.

Very few of these will have come back from the public printer. The first House bill relating to revenue and taxation, was delivered to the clerk this afternoon. It is voluminous, making a book of considerable size.

The standing committees will meet frequently this week to discuss certain measures which may come before them.

A resolution carried in the House today making the golden rod the state flower for Kentucky. Said resolution was introduced by T. P. Gabbard, of Owsley county, and district 71.

One very unique measure, in the form of a bill will be brought before the House by request of the "Daughters of the Confederacy," prohibiting the performance of the play, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" on any stage in the state. We hardly think it will go further than the committee room, as the best lawyers say it is unconstitutional.

Another bill which effects the manufacture of cigarettes, is the cause of a deal of lobbying.

No doubt, such a bill will have its proper consideration, and may, to some extent, alter the laws which pertain to the manufacture of the cigarette.

A Friendly Word.

[By Rustic.]

Those of you who peruse this article, and are in doubt as to the Silas of whom I write, all you have to do is "Guess," and you'll hit it.

On Christmas morning, last, his team ran away and a valuable nag, seven years old, was seriously injured, and after suffering some 9 or 10 days succumbed to "Lockjaw." A few days before the accident Silas was offered five $20. gold pieces for the animal, but refused the offer, as he valued it at $150. Depending upon his team for a livelihood, this blow was a severe one to Silas. It was indeed, one of the heavy straws that went to break the back of Silas.

His occupation as Mail-carrier between Marion and Shady Grove, is anything but remunerative. Were it not for the extra hauling he gets he would be completely submerged in debt.

Silas is patient. In fact he is a model of patience which protests even while it endures.

The object of this article is not a plea for aid in the manner of alms, but a sympathetic appeal to those who have hauling to be done, to give to him a show sufficient to enable him to earn enough to replace his almost irreparable loss.

We all know that, the best help is not to bear the troubles of others for them, but to inspire them with courage and energy to bear their burdens for themselves and meet the difficulties of life bravely.

The human story so far has been largely that of a discipline of misfortune and of pain.

He that has a kind heart can do anything that ought to be done, no matter how disagreeable it is to himself.

If one could see the working of a kind word, see its influence flitting through a life, see it bracing human energies, what romance you would then be able to read! A word of cheer, of encouragement, of sympathy, how it will enter into a life to brighten and to strengthen it! It's path no eye can discern; but it slips in at the ear, finds its way up the mysterious staircase that leads to the viewless mind, lodges itself in the chambers of memory, and at each moment of failing courage or of slackening nerve sends a magic spark thrilling through the soul which liberates fresh stores of energy for the hard and lifting task.

"Possession is ninety-nine points of the law" declare the gentlemen in office without an election.

A DOUBLE WEDDING

(Original.)
Gertrude Brett was an heiress. Her cases are usually considered as such, that they will be married for money, but Gertrude had always used to the possession of wealth did not appear to realize its value. Her sides, she was ingenious and cunning. Henry Dexter, the son of a parents, loved her, but after deliberation she gave her heart to Clarence Hawley. At any rate, she accepted Gertrude had an intimate friend, Edna Clarke, and those who knew Hawley best declared that if Edna Clarke had been the heiress, instead of Miss Brett, Miss Clarke would have been Mrs. Hawley. What every one else saw Gertrude did not appear to see—that her friend wanted her. But Edna, while she was ostracized Gertrude's friend and confidante, constantly accepting favors that Gertrude's wealth rendered possible, secretly hated the girl who was to be the man she herself wanted.

But a still greater surprise was in store for them. When it was announced that Gertrude, who had a near relatives living, had made a will leaving half of her fortune to Edna and the other half to Clarence Hawley, people considered it time for some one to interfere. Unfortunately there was no one near enough to the home to go to her and remonstrate. When she was of age there was no authority to forbid the disposition she had made of her property.

The next thing in this chain of events was Gertrude's sailing for a trip abroad, accompanied only by Edna. It was considered a frightful inducement to crime. Edna, loving her benefactress' affianced husband, inheriting half of her fortune, while Hawley was heir to the remainder, would have every opportunity to get rid of the one who stood between her and wealth and love.

Strangely enough, there was at least every appearance that this extreme view of the case had come about. In Switzerland the two girls joined a party to ascend a mountain. Gertrude insisted on making a detour alone with a guide and separated for some time from the other tourists. When he guide rejoined the party he came with out Gertrude, who, he reported, had slipped and fallen into a crevasse thousands of feet deep. This was the story that Edna brought home, and with it she brought ample documentary evidence of its truth. Nevertheless there were those who refused to believe it.

While legal proceedings were being taken to divide Gertrude's estate between the heirs it was announced that Hawley and Edna were engaged. Of course no one was surprised. It was simply considered an inevitable result of Gertrude's infatuation and that if murder had not been committed she had at least induced murder.

Meanwhile Henry Dexter, who sincerely loved Gertrude, went about secretly to look into the matter of the accident. But his departure became known. Since it did not seem to trouble the heirs, who were preparing for the wedding, the suspicions that clung to Edna were much allayed.

Cards for the wedding were issued, as usual, some time before the event was to come off. The wealth they were to receive did away with the prejudice against them, and people were looking forward to a brilliant affair. But one morning a week before the day set society met with a shock. Some one—it was supposed through malice—mailed a number of invitations to the wedding of Henry Dexter and Gertrude Brett, to take place on the same day and hour as that of Clarence Hawley and Edna Clarke. There was great indignation at this outrage, as it was considered, and it was supposed that when Henry Dexter returned he would take pains to discover and punish the perpetrator. The bride and groom expectant gave every evidence of being deeply wounded, and feeling, which had been against them, was turned in their favor.

The Dexter cards named the residence of Mrs. Whiting, a wealthy friend of Gertrude, as the place of the wedding, and society was surprised at the report that preparations were being made there for some important event. The night before the wedding, as announced, a startling report was circulated that both Dexter and Gertrude had been seen in town. The last link in the chain was the putting up of awnings leading from the street to Mrs. Whiting's residence.

At high noon the next day both weddings took place. The ceremony had scarcely pronounced Clarence and Edna man and wife before they were assured that at the same hour Henry and Gertrude had also been made one. In a twinkling their anticipations of wealth tumbled like air castles about them.

It turned out that Gertrude had not been so stupid after all. Suspecting her lover and her friend, she had kept her own counsel and laid a plan by which they should have every opportunity to prove or disprove her suspicions. During the mountain climb she had purposely separated herself from the party, bribed her guide to leave her at his home with his wife and report the fictitious accident. After Edna's engagement she had written Dexter, who immediately went to her. It was then that she and Dexter came to a decision as to their relations, and the forthcoming wedding was announced. The only revenge (she considered it rather a punishment for her friends' duplicity and Hawley's intention to marry her for money) that Gertrude cared to take was the double wedding.

THE NEW FIRM

The Hina Hardware Co.

FOR several years I have studied the question of how supplies could be furnished the Farmer, Gardener, Builder and other classes of people at the least cost and lowest possible expense. I have figured it out that debarring the cost and worry of keeping books, and debarring accounts that are never paid by some unfortunate individuals, but which profit on goods sold you help make up, cutting these items out I found that goods could be sold at 10 per cent. less, at least, on the cash basis, and that is what we have adopted.

ARE YOU WILLING TO BE IN BUSINESS WITH US?

And have one-half the regular profit usually made on Hardware? Then buy your goods at our store, the ONLY CASH Hardware Store in Crittenden County, and you will be convinced the profit has been divided with you, because you do not have to help pay the other fellow's account, nor the cost of keeping books. The prices will verify our statements. Come in and get our prices.

SUBSCRIPTION ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR.

Entered as second-class matter July 15, 1904, at the postoffice at Marion, Ky., under Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

FRIDAY, JAN. 19, 1906.

In behalf of the general development of Crittenden Livingston counties, sister counties in every sense of the term, the effort to create a bi-county fair association for the purpose of holding annual fairs at a point selected by the association, should meet with general approval. The matter is to be considered at Salem Thursday, Jan. 25th.
An executive committee appointed by the respective farmers' association of the two counties. And it is to be hoped that definite plans of action will be laid for the successful execution of the scheme.

Tom Watson on Georgia.

The clutch of the Corporations is on the Democratic machinery in Georgia, and the people have been submissive to the Democratic machine for one reason only.

The fear of the Negro has hypnotized
the Democratic voter into object submission to Hamp McWhorter and the Corporation Ring.

"The Whites cannot afford to divide;
if they do the Negro will become the balance of power and the master of the situation."

This never-failing formula has thus kept the Wall Street representatives in power.

What do these corrupt politicians
fear?

The Independent voter.

Above all things they dread the citizen who reads and thinks for himself.
What they love above all things is the blind, servile party hack who will be driven anywhere, at any time, by any driver "for the sake of the party," which means, of course, for the sake of the "men who control."

The Ring politicians are more subtle than serpents and they know what it is that will always lay the Independent flat on his back.

It is the fear of the Negro.

They know what it is that will always drive the Whites into the Democratic harness.

It is the fear of the Negro.

Therefore, the Ring Rulers who help Wall Street Corporations to plunder our people are opposed to the disfranchisement of the Negro.

That bugaboo—Negro Domination—
their mainstay, their chief asset, their pet mascot, their never-failing means of striking terror into the souls of the Whites and compelling them to follow the Ring pill no matter how bitter.

To put the negro out of politics
would send the Ring Rulers into bankruptcy by depriving them of their most valuable asset.

Hence, their fierce, unscrupulous effort to keep for the Negro, nominally,

what the detested Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments gave him.

I use the word "nominally" because the Ring Rulers have already disfranchised the negro, in effect, by the practice of the nominating primary, called the White Primary. In this nominating primary no negro is allowed to vote; and who ever gets the nomination in the White primary gets what is equivalent to an election, for the reason that the negroes are in a minority in the state and could not elect a ticket
if they tried.

The negro is not allowed to help nominate. He can cast his ballot in the general election and ratify the action of the White Primary, if he likes.
Or he can cast ballot of vain protest.
Neither his vote of ratification, nor of protest, amount to a row of pins.

Everything has been already decided in the White Primary, and the vote of the negro is reduced to waste paper.

Is that plain?

At the present time the qualified negro voters of Georgia have a legal right which is of no value to them.
They have a franchise but no where to put it. They have a theoretical right to swim, but are practically denied access to the water. Burning with the thirst of Tantalus, the water surrounds them, but mocks them—for they cannot drink.

The White Primary completely deprives the negro of the opportunity to make use of his vote.

Therefore, the proposition to amend our Constitution so as to disfranchise him, does not injure the negro. It leaves him no worse than it finds him.
It takes away nothing which he actually enjoys. The amendment to the Constitution would merely incorporate the principal of the White Primary into organic law.

But you ask:

If the amendment will do no more than the White Primary, why the amendment?

There's the crux of the whole matter.
The White Primary is unknown to the law, is a party device, is temporary in its nature, depends upon a majority vote in the Democratic Executive Committee every two years, may be put aside at any time, settles nothing permanently, and leaves the negro where he might be called in to act as umpire in a dispute between the whites. In such a case the bugaboo of Negro Domini-nation would materialize, at once, into a grisly, revolutionary, chas-making fact.

As an original proposition, the white Populists of Georgia did not favor the disfranchisement of the negro. We contended that, in as much as the black was clothed by law with the right to vote, he should be given a free ballot and a fair count. We believe that, with the frank and full concession of this exercise of his legal rights, would disappear the friction between the two races, and that on economic questions, vitally concerning his welfare as a laborer and citizen, the negro race would divide just as the whites divide. Whether we are right or wrong in this, God alone knows; but we think we are right, and we stood manfully
for the doctrine.

But we went down in defeat. Our position on the negro question had much to do with that defeat. After we were routed, the Democrats adopted the White Primary, and have been using it many years. Therefore we have to deal with the situation as we find it. We did not make it; we cannot unmake it; we have only the option of saying what we will do as between two, and only two possible policies:

1. Shall we go with those who stand pat on the White Primary, which deprives the negro of his effective ballot so long as the faction in power wants him deprived, and thus insure the rule of the Corporation; or 2, shall we do by law what the White Primary does by factious vote and, having got rid of the fear of the negro, rise in our might and smash the Corporation Ring.

The white Populists of Georgia could not get rid of the White Primary, if they wished to do so; therefore, they could not restore to the negro his effective ballot if they tried, but in helping to settle the negro question by compelling the Ring Rulers to make the principal of the White Primary a law that all must obey, we do not make the condition of the negro any worse than it is now, and we make the condition of the whites better, because infinitely more independent.

To free the State from this eternal peril, Hoke Smith says: "Enact the principle of the White Primary into organic law, so that white people may escape the haunting fear of the Negro Domination. Liberate the whites so that they may act independently of the Ring Rulers, if they want to. Free the whites so they may rise in revolt against the Wall Street corporations, without fear that a division among the whites may result in Negro Domination."

And what do the Ring Rulers reply
to this?

"No. We will not, disfranchise the blacks. We may need them. With the White Primary, we keep them out as long as we want them out. As long we want them to stay out, they'll stay out. But whenever we are driven to that, as a last resort, we will drop the White Primary, declare for a general election, pay up the negro's back tax, register him as a voter and use him as a prop to our power. If we allow the negro to be disfranchised, he can never be used by either faction of the whites, the fear of the Negro Domination will pass away, the crank of the party lash will lose its terror, the white majority will rule the State, and we will fall, as Lucifer fell, never to rise again."—From Watson's Magazine.

Educational Column

W. HUGH WATSON, Editor.

How many things will your education do for you? If it is in no wise a bread earner, it is a useless appendage. Education, to be practical, must have an earning power, and, to be complete, it must have that other essential, economy.

"Language training" is the subject of an article in this issue. Two other articles by the same writer have appeared in this column. J. B. McNeely, their author, has had splendid experience along this line and the things he says are worth careful perusal.

LANGUAGE TRAINING.

Every exercise of the primary school
that leads to knowledge properly ends in such knowledge expressed by the pupils. This is true of the lessons in nature, human life, morals and manners.

And all incidental teaching needs to be forcibly impressed by some appropriate exercise.

A true language course embodies all the fundamental principles in expression and there are five series of exercises to be considered, as follows:

Observation, picture, story, dictation and letter writing. All should receive due attention. But in this article we shall notice observation and letter writing.

Observation lessons may be devoted to common objects, to actions observed by pupils, objects noticed on the road to and from school, facts first expressed by pupils orally, then written on the board by the teacher. Then require the pupils to reproduce the same exercise in writing for the next day's recitation.

The written lessons of the pupils may now be read and corrections made in regard to spelling and capital letters.
The use of the period, paragraph, abbreviation and quotations should be taught as the class advances.

Just here we have an opportunity to teach the much abused and much talked of nature study. You need not tell them you are going to teach nature study. Just go to work and teach it anyway. Have the pupils to name six or eight kinds of trees that grow around the school house and as many kinds of fruit trees. Have them to be explicit in their answers as to the different kinds of bark of trees, kinds of leaves and manner in which they grow.
Have them tell of the birds, their songs, and the flowers and their colors.

Care should be taken to lead the pupils to tell well the facts learned and all new words should be written and retained for use in the next recitations.
Children like to see pictures and talk about them. They appeal not only to the eye but also to the imagination.
Not only do they give pleasure but their study trains the power of observation. They may be made the basis of exercises in conversation and reading and in various ways they may be used in other exercises.

But the main facts now to be expressed are those which the mind sees in the picture and the imagination will readily respond to skillful training.

As we have had more or less to say in our other articles in regard to pictures, stories and object teaching, we will pass on to our last theme, which is "letter writing."

This is one of the most important written forms of language training.
Because of the necessity of every person to write letters whatever may be their occupation.

A letter is a written conversation between two or more persons.

When we consider that for the most of us, nearly all the writing we do after we leave school, is in the form of letters, we ought to take time to teach letter writing so that our pupils may have the proper form and skillful expression when they go out from our schools into the business world. Letters are divided into social and business letters.

The first are either personal or formal and we, as teachers, should give

A FEW PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

For the Patrons of the R. F. D. Routes and Others Concerned. "Little Things Added Together Make Big Things and Which Can be as Easily Done as Not."

1. You will be doing your carrier a great favor if you will stamp all your mail before putting same in box, either by putting on the ordinary stamps, or, better yet, use the government stamped envelopes with your name written upon upper left-hand corner. This will guarantee delivery or return of the letter.
2. In case you should not have the stamps or the stamped envelopes, wrap the necessary amount up in paper and fasten to letter in some good manner, remembering that in cold weather if the money is put in box loose the carrier has to take off his gloves or mittens to get hold of these loose pennies.
3. In addressing your letter do not write above the middle of the envelope, because the letter has to be plainly postmarked and the address may be partly blurred by being struck with the postmarking stamp.
4. You will also help the handling of the mail by always putting the stamp in the upper right-hand corner.
5. In addressing a letter to a visitor or some one who is not a regular patron of a rural route or postoffice, you will be helping the service by marking on the envelope, in whose care the letter or package should go.
6. If you have visitors kindly give the carrier their name by putting slip in box.
7. In regard to boxes—Help your carrier by having a good one in a GOOD, EASY PLACE TO DRIVE UP TO, and oil the hinges occasionally.
8. Mail boxes are protected by the government—any tampering with them by anyone not interested should be reported at once to your postmaster.
9. Anything deposited in boxes is counted mail matter and is subject to ordinary postage rates.
10. It is suggested that the patrons buy their stamps ahead and so do away with the penny business.

GEO. M. CRIDER, Postmaster
NOBLE P. HILL, Carrier

Special attention to the following parts:

- The heading, place and time of writing.
- The salutation to be placed a line below the heading and to the left.
- The body of the letter—that which we write.
- The form of closing.
- The signature.

The superscription or the address on the envelope.

The above parts of letter writing are the simple forms that occur in all social and business letters and they cannot be taught by a formal lecture at the blackboard by the teacher. But the pupils must do the work themselves over and over again until they are perfect in every particular.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS

By Rustic.

A sympathetic lawyer remarked the other day that he deplored the necessity which compelled girls and young women to earn their own living. He thought that unmarried daughters ought to stay at home with their mothers, guarded and shielded while young, and when time should reverse things, that the mothers should in turn be cared for and nursed in their old age by tender and affectionate daughters. No one would more heartily desire such a life than many of the young women on whom is laid the necessity of earning their own and perhaps their mother's daily bread. But we must take things as they are, and the fact is, that all through the country, thousands and tens of thousands of girls leave their homes immediately after breakfast and return to it only at nightfall. Too many of these unhappily are country girls who have left the sweet and wholesome influences of their simple life for a city's toil and temptation and such a home as a boarding house affords. They can have their mothers only in their dreams or in the rare letter.
But, once in a while, you find a cozy nook from which the daughter goes forth to her daily work with the mother's spoken blessing and is followed through every busy hour by her tender love and invisible presence. Such a girl is guarded by breast-plates of steel from foes without and foes within. If things go wrong at ease or desk, the worry and anxiety will dissolve when the lamps are lighted and the curtains are drawn, and the troublesome world is shut out. "As one whom his mother comforteth." How much the old Scripture writer expressed in that phrase! Hard things are made easy and crooked places straight by the very presence of some mothers. The sunshine which radiates from their lives is perennial. Human lives flourish in it, and it seems the most natural thing in the world for plants to bloom around them in beauty and fragrance, and even for fair semblances of flowers to spring in crevices and silk from the touch of their deft fingers. It may be that, while their daughters toil, they must suffer not only the pain of separation, but of physical infirmity. But no word of complaint is reserved for the bread-winner, as she comes home at night. The end of the day is domestic peace and rest. More real happiness is caused by such glad reunions than is often found in families where the necessity of daily separation is never felt. Happiness is felt by intensity, not by lapse of time.
Could such homes remain unbroken, there would be no better boon to ask than honorable labor abroad and sweetness and peace at home. But who has not sorrowed with those who have been bereft of the fragile yet mighty influence that blessed all who came within its scope? Here is a teacher whose every thought was shared with the dear home-keeper who must henceforth sit in silence and alone. Here is the faithful clerk who found courage and cheer for a life of routine from the sparkling wit and cheer of one, more a sister than a mother, and now forced to listen in vain for the merry laugh or helpful word. Here is yet another, loved and honored in her baby life, blessed and inspired by the sweet guardian of home, who must wet her bread with tears, and bend with aching heart over her weary desk because the armchair is vacant and the brightness of the little home is forever eclipsed by the withdrawal of that mother's winning smile. Life stretches on long, and as it seems, almost purposeless to those who are left behind. But the very shadow shows how bright the past has been. With the sadness must be gratitude for happy memories that will still be inspirations. When their lives are compared with the countless number of those who have never garnered such blessed sheaves of memory, they seem rich in their inheritance. The mothers may be taken, but "such as these" who have "lived and died," still live in the hearts of those who love them, and their spirit will so rest on their daughters that they shall surely, in time be clothed with the "spirit of praise for the garment of heaviness."

O woman, thou must falter much
And travel far
To free thy spirit from the touch
Of wing and star!

Danger of a Cold and How to Avoid Them.

More fatalities have their origin in or result from a cold than from any other cause. This fact alone should make people more careful as there is no danger whatever from a cold when it is properly treated in the beginning. For many years Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been recognized as the most prompt and effectual medicine in use for this disease. It acts on nature's plan, loosens the cough, relieves the lungs, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. Sold by HAYNES & TAYLOR, the enterprising druggists, of Marion.

How Is Your Heart?

Is your pulse weak, too slow, too fast, or does it skip a beat? Do you have shortness of breath, weak or hungry spells, fainting, smothering or choking spells, palpitation, fluttering, pains around the heart, in side and shoulder, or hurt when lying on left side?

If you have any of these symptoms your heart is weak or diseased, and cannot get better without assistance.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure strengthens weak hearts, and rarely ever fails to cure heart disease. Try it, and see how quickly you will find relief.

"About January 1st, 1902, I took down with weakness and dropsy, and gradually grew worse. I was told by my family physician that my case was hopeless. My neighbors and family had given me up to die. My limbs and body were swollen to one-third larger than normal size, and water had collected around my heart. For at least three months I had to sit propped up in bed to keep from smothering. I sent for five bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, and by the time I had taken them all I was entirely cured. I feel better than I have for twenty years, and I am able to do any kind of work on my farm. My attending physician told me that if it hadn't been for Dr. Miles' Heart Cure I would now be in my grave."

L. T. CURD, Wilmore, Ky.
Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails he will refund your money.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

LESSON III, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 21.

Text of the Lesson, Luke II, 40-52. Memory Verse, 51—Golden Text, Luke II, 52—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1906, by American Press Association.]

Between the story of the wise men of the last lesson and this one the recorded events are the flight into Egypt, the sojourn there, the return to the land of Israel, the settling down at Nazareth and the three dreams in connection therewith, whereby Joseph was guided perfectly. These and the massacre of the infants are recorded in Matt. i, 13-23, and attention is called to the fact that in these events at least three Old Testament predictions were fulfilled, for all Scripture must be fulfilled. God always watches over His word to perform it (Jer. i, 12). The first verse of our lesson covers all that is recorded of Jesus from His infancy to the age of twelve, but the four sayings are full of suggestiveness. The child grew, and this child was "God manifest in the flesh." He might have come in a full grown body, such as He gave to Adam, but then He would not have been perfectly one with us, "in all points tempted like as we are" (Heb. iv, 15), and all boys and young men might have said: "He can't sympathize with me, for He never was a boy. He was always strengthened by the Spirit, and He was the wisdom of God, full of grace and truth" (Eph. iii, 16; I Cor. i, 24; John i, 14, 15).

There is a whole lesson in "the feast of the Passover," with its sprinkled blood, the lamb to be eaten, the bitter herbs, the unleavened bread, the great deliverance of Israel in the past and the greater deliverance which draweth nigh (Ex. xii; Jer. xxxii, 7, 8; Amos ix, 14, 15), all pointing to and depending upon Him who in our lesson is the boy of twelve. Who can tell the interest Jesus manifested in the details of the great feast, understanding it as no one else could? Is it any wonder that He tarried in Jerusalem in the temple with these teachers of the law, listening to them and asking them questions (verse 46), and can we be surprised that they were astonished at His intelligence and at the answers He gave? This was a rare opportunity for Him, and He knew it, for them also, but they knew it not, for there was one in their midst whom they knew not.

We cannot but be surprised that Joseph and Mary would start homeward without their boy. It shows the folly of supposing when we ought to be sure, and in all things that are revealed to us in this word it is our privilege to know the certainty by most surely believing (Luke i, 1, 4), yet it is a most common thing for believers to reply when asked concerning eternal life and the forgiveness of their sins, "I hope so." Such do not know the joy and peace of believing (Rom. xv, 13). In the case of Joseph and Mary one hour's neglect brought them three days' anxiety and reminds us of the loved one in Hong Kong. It is even so still, for if we allow anything to cause us to cease to be occupied with Christ—a book, a place, a person, an occupation, fellowship broken is not easily restored, and there are many who cry or who should cry, "Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation" (Ps. li, 12).

Did they pray as they searched for Him those three days? I know not. They did not have Phil. iv, 6, 7, but they might have known Prov. iii, 5, 6; Job xxxi, 4; xlii, 2. Do the three days suggest those other three days when even to John and the other disciples He was a lost Messiah? For it is written, "They knew not the Scripture that He must rise again from the dead" (John xx, 9). When they finally found Him in the temple and in amazement asked Him why He had treated them so and told Him of their sorrowful search for Him His reply in verse 49 gives us His first recorded utterance as the Son of Mary, for what He asked the rabbis is not recorded. If the Revised Version is correct, then He seems to have asked them why they did not come at once to the temple to look for Him, knowing that He would be in His Father's house. If the ordinary reading is correct, "Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business or in the things of My Father?" what a glimpse we have of His knowledge of who He was and why He had come and of the time when He would rise superior to all human relationships! How striking it is that in this His first recorded utterance and in His last as He died on the cross He said, "Father." Count the number of times He used the name in His discourse and prayer on that last night and you will be still more interested and, it may be, find new significance in the words, "Your Heavenly Father knoweth," "My Father and your Father" (Matt. vi, 32; John xx, 17).

"About My Father's business" would be an excellent motto for every child of God at all times. The majority are like Mary and Joseph and understand not, but if, like Mary, we kept His sayings in our hearts and pondered them (verses 19, 51) in due time we would understand, and the water would be boiling water (Jas. i, xiv, 21). "Subject unto them," or, as Weymouth translates it, "always obedient to them," covers the next eighteen years at Nazareth, and what a word it is, for, as one has said, "Submission is the greatest mission on earth and the one great essential to either home missions or foreign missions." See Jas. iv, 7; I Pet. ii, 18, 19; III, 1; v, 5. On the last verse of the lesson see II Sam. v, 10, margin.

THE CLOD-HOPPER AND THE BALD-HEADED MAN.

[A story of love and business told in verse, and written expressly for THE RECORD by Robert C. Haynes, author of "Dark Days and Bright."]

XIV.

"I can not consider your offer at all," Imogene made reply. "be the pay great or small; My health, as I told you, is on a decline, And I've made up my mind, sir, at once to resign."

"You can get, as I told you," went on Imogene, That Samson-like, robust and hard-pounding Green; I am forced to rest up for the sake of my health, Which is much more to me, sir, than millions of wealth."

"Now just listen a moment to me, Imogene; There are worse things than thumping a writing machine. Would you give up position, your wages, your work, For that clod-hopping, hod-toting, tow-headed Turk?"

XV.

Tho' by nature so gentle, sweet-tempered, serene, This speech was too much for the good Imogene; Her eyes sparkled brightly, like twin balls of fire, And her fair, pretty cheeks were ting'd deeply with ire.

"Tow-headed or not, sir," in wrath she began, "He's as good as a blank, brainless, bald-headed man! Yourself, sir, and money may go in a bunch— On the writing machine I have punch'd my last punch!"

And so up, out and off went the fair Imogene, Left the bald-headed man and the writing machine, While the grim old machine seemed to wink at the boss, As he sat there in silence, computing his loss.

XVI.

"I will get it all back on that scoundrelly Turk! His rascally schemes against me will not work," Mused the boss, while the letters stamp'd on the machine Seem'd to form in the sentence: "Bye-bye, Imogene!"

Imogene, though so wrathful a moment before, When out on the street was her sweet self once more, So with leisurely foot-steps she started to go To her home, five blocks off, down on Middleton Row.

As she pass'd down the street where the men were at work, She smiled as the men shouted: "Give us brick, Turk!" But she pass'd on and by, and without any stop, And with only a bow to the man at the top.

XVII.

"That's a sweet, noble girl," mused the man at the top, "I'll just bet she's been fired, and if so I'll not stop Till I've flogg'd that big, bandy-legg'd, bald-headed man Worse than Russia was flogg'd by the plucky Japan!"

As still on down the street went the fair Imogene, She was met near her home by the hard-pounding Green. She gave him a nice, friendly bow and a smile, And the key-puncher's hat was raised up in good style.

"That's as noble a girl as I ever have seen, And I'll bet she's been fired," mused the hard-pounding Green.

"Well, there'll be something doing when I come across That great, gander-eyed gump of a bald-headed boss!"

XVIII.

A week rolled away, and Miss Imogene Moss— She was free, of course, now, from her bald-headed boss— Had been busy assisting in household affairs, Making pies, sweeping floors and the dusting of chairs.

Joseph, too, had been busy, still lifting up hods— He had almost forgotten he'd ever hopp'd clods— So still up went the brick to the man at the top, With never a shirk and with scarcely a stop.

One ev'ning, however, when Joe had quit work— For the man at the top had cried, "Time is up, Turk!"— And had started for home, as was always his plan, He was met on the way by the bald-headed man.

XIX.

"Let me speak to you, Turk, just a moment," he said; "I have heard that you've made up your mind soon to wed. Now, of course, I can't blame you, 'tis better, I own, As the Bible has said, than to live all alone."

"You've a good, paying job, that of lifting up hods— I'm agreeing with you, it beats hopping the clods— And I'd like well to see you thus settled in life, In a nice, happy home with a sweet, loving wife."

"There are many girls, Joe—there's Miss Imogene Moss, A good-enough girl, in her way," said the boss, "She's in fact an expert, much more so than Green, When it comes to the work on a writing machine."

XX.

"And yet, after all, there's a difference, Joe— For altho' you are young, yet all this you may know— She might run a machine without friction or strife, And yet make a man an indifferent wife."

"And Joseph," still went on the bald-headed man, "A man may work on, do the best that he can, And yet, what's the good, if he marries a wife, And is hamper'd and hemm'd in and hen-peck'd for life?"

"What a hopeless, unhappy, unfortunate fate! What a dark and deplorable, glimmerless state! And yet, such would be your condition, I ween, With that green, giggling, gum-chewing gump, Imo—!"

XXI.

That smooth-going sentence was never complete! Like a huge rubber ball, Joe Turk bounc'd to his feet! Enraged and indignant, he now made across To where stood, like a stump, the big, bald-headed boss! "You scoundrel!" cried Turk, "You contemptible cur! To so speak, without cause, disrespectful of her— That sweet, noble girl, the bright-eyed Imogene, Whom I took from your death-breeding writing machine!"

GROUP OF INTER-ESTING LETTERS

Letter From Former Citizens of Crittenden County Now in Other Countries.

Editor THE RECORD:

Please allow me a small space in your valuable paper.

The resources of Yakima is an inducement to eastern people to visit the valley and look over the chances to get more money than they have been getting in the East.

The Yakima Valley is located in the central part of the state of Washington extending from the Columbia River to the Cascade mountains, a distance of 150 miles.

The soil in this region is a volcanic soil, very deep and extremely rich. It is watered, the growth of plants, flowers, vegetables and grasses are simply wonderful. It is difficult to describe the minds of the masses to realize the wonders of this country where farmers get rich in a few years.

The writer of this article is not in the real estate business nor has he any property to sell, and only seeks to induce immigration to this valley because of the splendid opportunities offered in all lines and because of a just pride in the splendid works done and to be done in the near future.

There is under irrigation in the Yakima Valley 150,000 acres of highly productive land. Much of this lies tributary to the city of North Yakima.

The United States government will, without doubt, in the next few years, irrigate 350,000 acres more in the valley, spending from $4,000,000 to $6,000,000 for irrigation works. The land will support in the rural districts 10,000 families, or 300,000 people, with 1,000,000 more in the cities. Crops grown here are hops, fruits, berries, etc., all of which grow very prolific. Land is worth from $10 to $1,000 per acre. The high priced land is covered with a magnificent forest of orchard, having fine homes, barns, etc., on ten to twenty acre farms.

Population is very dense. The farms do not average more than fifteen acres each, from which amount of land a large family can be supported in efficiency. We now have one railroad which is taxed to its utmost to move the produce from the valley, but we have two new railroads under construction, and one is a through transcontinental line.

Markets are always good and prices obtained for farm products average very high. Apples are shipped to Montana, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Chicago, New York and to London, Eng., and the best of them bring fancy prices. Here in Yakima, the climate is ideal, plenty of warm sunshine all summer, bringing crops to maturity and imparting gorgeous colors to fruit and flowers.

There are farmers who clear as high as $10,000 per year from a forty acre farm.

North Yakima, located near the center of this splendid region, is a thriving city of 10,000 people, wide-awake and hustling, with stores and stocks of goods as fine as can be run in any city. There are splendid churches, some costing $40,000 to $50,000, and five large schools, saw-mills, flour mills, ice plants, etc., three banks in which are deposited over $2,000,000, most of which belongs to the farmer. They have an electric light and water system with pure, sparkling water brought down from the snow capped mountains. Yakima has miles of beautiful shade trees kept alive by streams of crystal water which run constantly down each side of the wide street during the summer time.

The writer will never forget the feeling of pride and joy which came over him on beholding for the first time these streams of rippling water with the long rows of green trees.

The winters are very mild. Today, Jan. 4, the sun is shining brightly. No wind. The barometer in the shade at 2 p. m. is 28 degrees. The pure water and early climate make the country healthful and very enjoyable.

Yours respectfully,
WILLIAM S. HAMBY.

Letter From Fort Du Pont, Delaware.

Editor THE RECORD:

If you will allow me a small space in your valuable paper, I will explain to those who have asked me about the unrest in China.

An alarming factor is the increase of force in the Philippines, significant of fear and trouble in the empire. Dispatches from Manila stating that there is much activity among the troops there and that three regiments are under field orders "in view of possible eventualities in China" seem to confirm the apprehension felt in diplomatic circles concerning the situation in middle kingdom.

While officials of the war department say they know nothing of any regiments being placed under field orders,

VOTE FOR PEGGY AND THE CHILDREN

Contributed by J. N. TOWERY

But this did not settle the question in the Republican party for a new power in politics appeared upon the scene. At the suggestion of the national federation for majority rule, it was decided to question candidates. The California state federation of labor and the California direct legislation league took up the work in a clear and concise letter explaining and embodying the issue. Each candidate was questioned in such a manner that he could not plead ignorance while silence would place him under suspicion of being opposed to the people's rule.

The California direct legislation league issued a letter somewhat similar to the state federation of labor in several states. Organized labor used a sixteen page address and questions were published by national federation for majority rule and supplied without charge.

In this way the Republican candidates were questioned after the state convention had refused to promise that the party, if placed in power in the legislature, would submit a constitutional amendment for the referendum and initiative. As the result of the question the action of the state convention was severed. Fifty of the seventy-four successful Republican candidates for the legislature pledged themselves in writing, if elected, they would vote for a constitutional amendment, the details of which should be as set forth in the demands of organized labor and of the direct legislation league.

The Democratic and union labor members, twenty assemblymen and five of the newly elected members of the senate were pledged by their party platforms and they redeemed their pledges. But half of the senate held over and it was here that the railroad magnates and other monopolies were able to defeat submission as will appear in the following:

PEOPLE'S RIGHT TO BALLOT.

For several weeks after the session began it was believed by the advocates of majority rule that there would be no difficulty in securing the necessary two-thirds vote in the senate, for the question did not touch the merits of the referendum and initiative. The question was simply: "Will the hold-over senate recognize the rights of the people to ballot upon the proposed change in the system of government?"—a mere right to self-government expressly reserved in the bill of rights and publicly disputed by no one. All political power says the California bill of rights is inherent in the people's government, is instituted for the protection, security and benefit of all the people and they have the right to alter or reform the same whenever the public good may require it. Furthermore while the campaign was in progress the people believed important questions would prevail and that they would have the right to take a referendum and vote on all questions. I believe the people after hearing a question publicly or thoroughly discussed, can always be trusted to decide it with wisdom and they do not deny that orders have been issued to send several regiments out to Manila in the near future. Some of these are to take the place of returning regiments, but it is stated that the net result of these orders will be the increase of the American force in the islands by at least two thousand.

Coming as this does, when the force in the islands has been reduced to the ten thousand which Secretary Taft had declared was sufficient for the needs of the Philippines, it is regarded as highly significant of preparation for possible trouble in some quarter.

Especially does this theory find color from the fact, stated by those who have been noticing events, that there is an unusually large preparation of field artillery going out to the islands where artillery has not been needed heretofore. The coincidence of this strengthening of the military force coming at the same time as the announcement that the cruisers Galveston and Chattanooga are to leave Admiral Sigbee's fleet at Gibraltar and proceed through the Suez canal to Manila, is proof, it is said, that there is a probability of the Asiatic fleet being further strengthened.

In diplomatic circles there has been much talk of unrest in China as the result of the anti-American "boycot" this taking the form of opposition to all foreigners. This is attributed largely to agitation on the part of young China educated abroad, who are seeking to bring about political upheavals at home and seizing upon the anti-foreign feelings for their purposes. Their propaganda is one of China for the Chinese. Most respectfully,
EDWARD LARGE,
Sergeant 45 Co. Coast Artillery.

Letter From a Kentucky Boy.

Mr. Editor:

As I have not seen anything from secure the privilege to vote on all questions.

Petitions were circulated that when presented to the legislature, contained 22000 names. The various organizations that passed resolutions to that effect were said to represent 100,000 men, all pledged voters, and of about 300,000 in the state. A delegate convention of forty farmer's clubs representing the farming community of the seven southern countries of the state unanimously asked for the submission of the amendment. The situation in the state about the first of February was described by Mr. Preble, of the legislative committee of the state federation of labor: "So far, we know of no opposition and in view of the pledges received and the strength of organized labor in California it seems almost incredible that representatives will have the brazen face and treachery to openly oppose it, we are sanguine of success."

MONOPOLY'S POWER BEHIND A THRONE.

But all the special interest of the state realized that their existence was at stake. They lined up their forces and in the race of determined threats, by the legislative committee of organized labor and of the direct legislation league to defeat their re-election, fourteen of the senators placed themselves on record as refusing to allow a vote by them and a constitutional amendment for majority rule in city affairs, a permission which had passed the house by a vote of five to one. Thirteen other senators absented themselves or did not vote. This, out of a total of forty, of whom twenty were hold-overs.

The senate refused also to take up the question of allowing a vote by the people on an amendment for majority rule in state affairs, whereas, permission had been granted in the house by fifty-five to four. In short, the hold-over senators and a few others denied the people of the state the right to self-government. This revolutionary action was taken while the entire body of organized laborers, a large number of farmers' organizations and thousands of petitioners were protesting.

This demonstrates the length to which the strength of the monopolies have gone. It shows just what the people have to meet. The people must do some effective work before they can free themselves from monopoly rule—the rule of the few. It is the last great fight for emancipation with majority rule installed. The republic will live.

I have given a pretty full account of the working of monopoly in the golden state. The same can be said of all other states. Class legislation breeds trust. Class legislation is the mother of the beef trust, the tobacco trust, the standard oil trust, the steel trust, in short, all other trusts. Now, the people have their eyes on trust, and, as I understand, the initiative and referendum is for the people from which to get up laws and to have them discussed and to bring our legislature nearer to the people by doing the bidding of the people instead of monopolies and the republic will live.

the good old state of Illinois I will tell something of it.

I live in White county on the Skillet Fork river. Carmi is the county seat of White county situated on the Little Wabash river, surrounded by as good land as ever the sun shines on and as good farmers, good market, good railroad, good roads and good people.

Our main crop is wheat and corn. Corn is king.

This is a level country—no rocks and no hills to speak of.

I live on the B. & O. railroad, 38 miles from Shawneetown. We have two trains a day each way and I live within one-half mile of the town of Springerton. It has a fine school, three churches, Methodist, Christian and Latter Day Saints, or Mormons, two dry goods stores, three grocery stores, two hardware, two blacksmiths, one harness shop and no saloons.

This is a fine country. Land is high, running from $40 to $100 an acre. Good, black land is worth from $75 to $100 per acre. White and hill land is not so high. We raise from 40 to 80 bushels of corn per acre and 25 bushels of wheat. Rent is high but ground is good. I am well satisfied with old White county, therefore, I will close and go and feed old Tobe and Duke.

Respectfully, KENTUCKY BOY.

A Jamaican Lady Speaks Highly of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mrs. Michael Hart, wife of the superintendent of Cart Service at Kingston, Jamaica, West India Island, says that she has for some years used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs, croup and whooping cough and has found it very beneficial. She has implicit confidence in it and would not be without a bottle of it in her home. Sold by HAYNES & TAYLOR, the enterprising druggists, of Marion.

THE LITTLE POCKET PHYSICIAN—A MEDICINE DROPPER OUTFIT

Hyomei Inhaler That Is Guaranteed by Haynes & Taylor to Cure a Case of Catarrh.

Thousands who have been cured by Hyomei, call the inhaler that comes with every outfit "The little pocket physician," as it is so small that it can be carried in the pocket or purse.

There is really no excuse whatever for anyone having catarrh now that Hyomei is so readily obtainable. If you have any doubts about its value, Haynes & Taylor will let you have a complete outfit with the understanding that unless it cures catarrh it will not cost you a cent.

A complete Hyomei outfit consists of "the little pocket physician," a medicine dropper, and a bottle of Hyomei, and costs only $1, while additional bottles of Hyomei can be procured for 50 cents, making it the most economical treatment for the cure of catarrh.

In Memoriam.

The death angel has come again and taken from the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Sisco one of their sweet little twin babes. Little Leaffa was eight months old when her spirit took its flight.

December 24, just as the sun was sinking in the beautiful golden west, the little one's spirit left this land and went to a supreme land where she will live in peace forever. But her leaving us behind brings deep sorrow to our hearts and leaves a pang of regret that can never be effaced.

She leaves a father, mother, brothers and sisters. Sleep on, little Leaffa, in thy peaceful bed till the resurrection morn.

Brief was her life—her crown soon won. A few short months and all was done. Her life like the tiny, pure snowdrop Bearing joy and gladness e'er it stopped, On earth was spotless and pure, Such as angels do endure. Sleep on, little babe, and take thy rest; God gave, he took, he knoweth best.

In a battle at Puroto Pinta, Santo Domingo, Gen. Demitro Droroguez, leader of the troops of the fugitive President Morales, was among many who were killed.
